

Turning Philanthropic Purpose into Meaningful Practice

Jill Coleman Vice President of Programs The Cameron Foundation

Jill is an experienced community development and philanthropy professional with over twenty-five years progressive experience with diverse communities, nationally and internationally. Her areas of expertise include strategic planning, resource, grant and partnership development, advocacy, executive management and high-level communications.

In her role as VP of Programs for The Cameron Foundation, she is responsible for strategically guiding the program team through a comprehensive grant-making and capacity building strategy while developing tools that enhance team dynamics and forwards the Foundations goals. She is responsible for annual board retreat and supports and directs any special “convening” efforts” while also representing the Foundation at local and national events, frequently representing the President.

Jill also co-produced “Children’s Voices, video expressing children’s views on poverty, in their own words.